Man About Town

BY SANDRA ISKANDER

Les Princes, a relaxed restaurant located just on the outskirts of Paris near the Parc des Princes stadium, is a cool cross between a brasserie and a fun bar. Designed with 50's Scandinavia and America in mind, the restaurant has a retro feel to it though still offers all the trimmings of contemporary French dining. Foie gras, smoked salmon and Camembert are on the menu as well as chic cocktails to be enjoyed on the terrace when the sun is out. Live music is also featured with a DJ spinning house and pop sounds every Thursday. Open until 2am every night, Les Princes is a great address to wind down.

It's not always easy finding somewhere to eat at 3am in a decent part of the city. L'Alsace is not only found on the most visited avenue but it is also open 24 hours a day. Serving traditional Alsatian cuisine, including sauerkraut, and a delectable seafood menu, this restaurant also offers a gorgeous ambiance complete with turn of the century décor of wood panelling and ornate mirrors.

A great new way to discover the city, especially when the sun is out, is to do so with a tuk-tuk. Hanif Cab organises 6 different tours including the 2-hour Latino tour, which will take you from the Arc de Triomphe to the Eiffel Tower with stops at the Louvre and the Notre Dame for photos. If you prefer, you can also plan your own itinerary, selecting where you want to go and what you want to see.
